History

2017 Center for Southeast Asian Studies
Seeking New Academic Formulations—Insights from the Field to the World

Preface

In January 2017, the Center for Southeast Asian Studies (CSEAS) was re-launched. Our new center originated in the merger of two centers. One is CSEAS, which was officially established in 1965 and over the years has accumulated a body of world-class scholarship generated from long-term multidisciplinary fieldwork in Southeast Asia. The former CSEAS celebrated its 50th anniversary in December 2015. The second is the Center for Integrated Area Studies (CIAS), which was established in 2006 by nine faculty members from the Japan Center for Area Studies at the National Museum of Ethnology. CIAS took on the challenge of pioneering a new approach to area informatics and comparative area studies and celebrated its 10th anniversary in April 2016. In 2017, these two centers merged, giving birth to a new CSEAS with the mission to promote holistic area studies of Southeast Asia and beyond. This is the first report in English to be published under our new center.

CSEAS faces a number of new challenges. The first is how to transform area studies from a science of understanding to a science of creating. We want to create new paradigms for co-existence based on deep and multi-disciplinary understandings of societies. In this context, we believe that the social and cultural experiences of Southeast Asia, and the wisdom embodied in them, provide us with valuable information and knowledge to stimulate ideas on how to look at life. The second is how to promote wider interdisciplinary studies. Since their inceptions, both centers have had interdisciplinarity at the heart of their approaches. However, with fast-paced socio-economic globalization and rapidly advancing science and technology, we are compelled to collaborate with new disciplines, such as informatics and medicine. Finally, there is a pressing need to explore new research methods and elaborate research methodologies. Transdisciplinary studies enable us to pursue a deeper commitment to society and innovate research outcomes. We aim to strengthen our role as an international research hub for area studies of Southeast Asia and beyond in order to respond to these challenges.

One year has passed since the establishment of the new CSEAS. We are working under new in-house divisions and two in-house centers, the ASEAN Research Platform and the Glocal Information Platform. Additionally, we have set up two new programs, a post-doctoral fellowship program and a global online video distribution program. The former internationally recruits rising stars while the latter will disseminate our research work more widely to civil society. We hope that these programs will serve as new interfaces for us to develop as a world-class research institute.

Although we are still in the process of establishing our new institute, I believe that on-going discussions and consensus-making will be indispensable for further strengthening our institute. I will step down from the directorship at the end of March 2018, and we will welcome the new director, Prof. Yoko Hayami, on April 1, 2018. I have deeply appreciated your generous support and constructive criticism during my term, and sincerely hope that these will continue under the new director.

Reorganization of CSEAS and CIAS

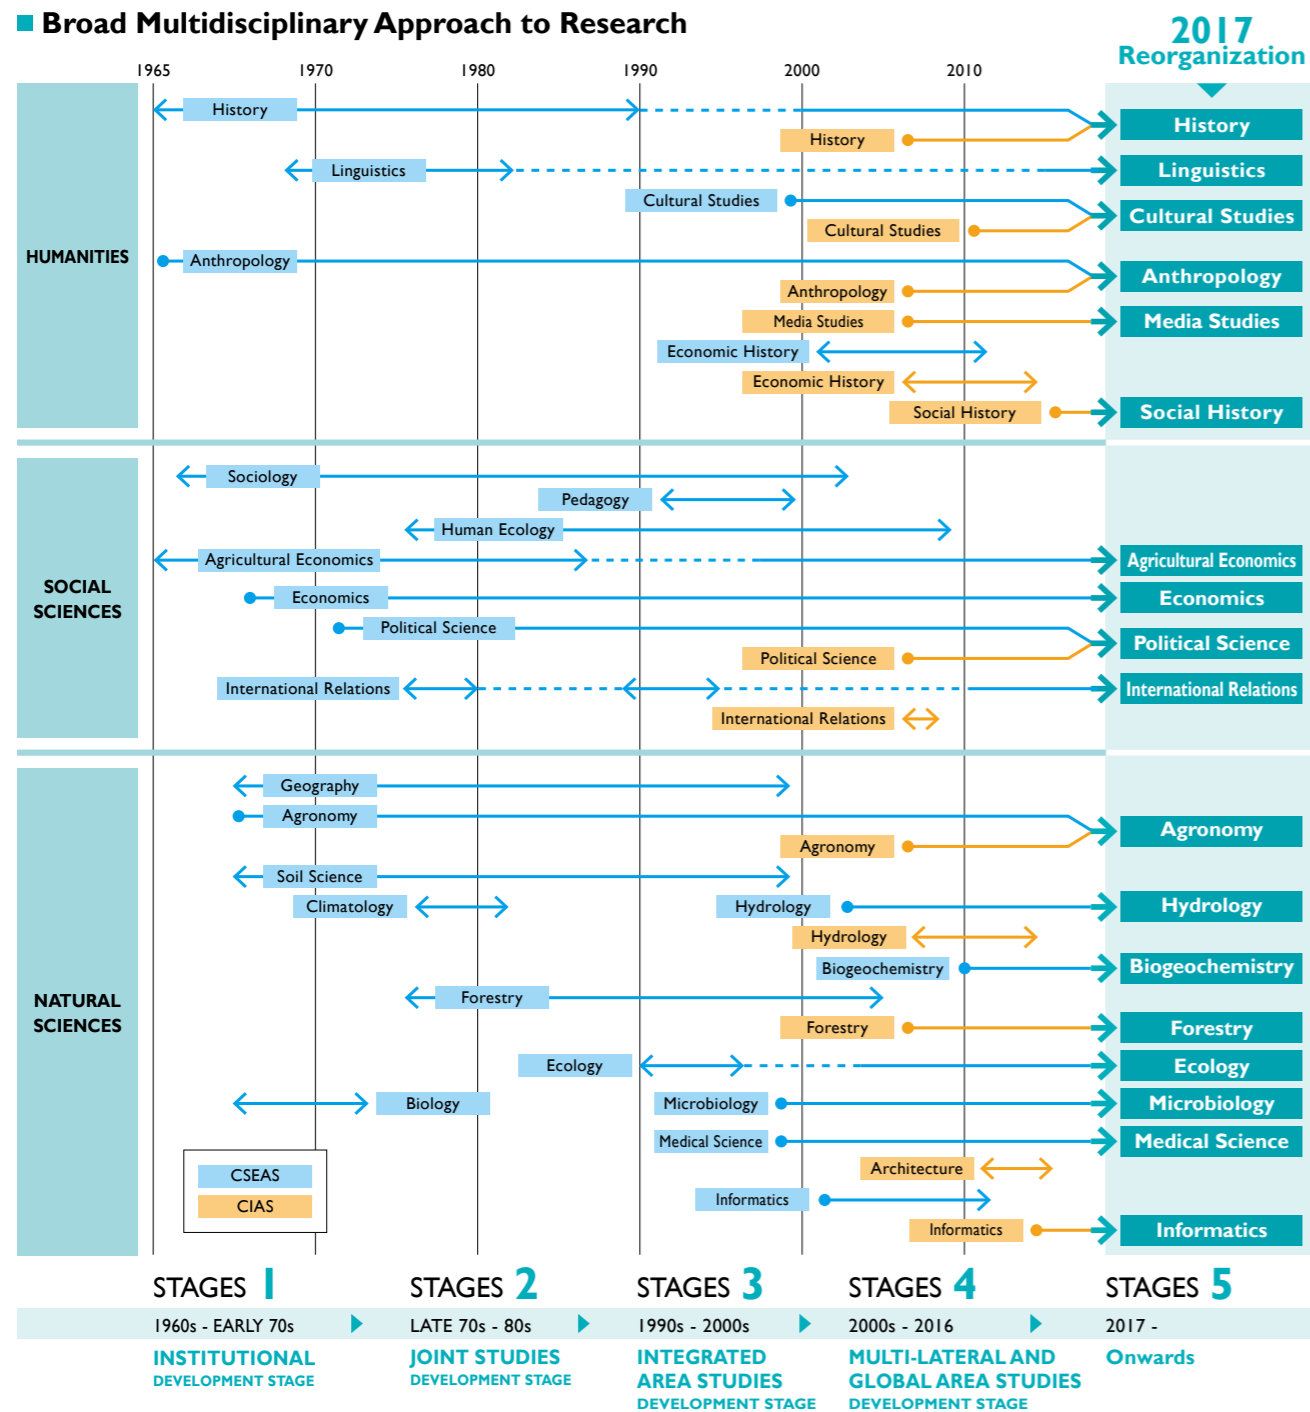

Objectives

- To engage with and develop solutions to complex global issues
- To strengthen social- and humanities- centered interdisciplinary research approaches
- To enhance understanding and appreciation of the value of diversity in human societies

Promotion of trans-disciplinary collaborative research

- To form academic communities that can deal with transnational issues
- To move toward life-oriented research approaches attuned to regional diversity
- To create socially innovative approaches to the needs of the environment
- To share and use global information resources

Broad Multidisciplinary Approach to Research

Research Activities

Grants-in-Aid for Scientific Research Projects

CSEAS scholars have been awarded funding for various interdisciplinary and transdisciplinary topics under Grants-in-Aid for Scientific Research Projects run by Japan Society for the Promotion of Science (JSPS).

Flagship Projects

Japan-ASEAN Science, Technology and Innovation Platform (JASTIP)

<http://jastip.org/en/>

The project aims to contribute the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) in Japan and ASEAN through collaborative research on science and technology in the fields of energy and environment, biomaterials and biodiversity, and disaster prevention. It also promotes the collaboration between academic and private sectors and fosters young researchers through multiple research networks in the region.

Three satellite labs

Energy and environment lab

National Science and Technology Development Agency, Thailand (NSTDA)

- Developing recyclable energy to contribute to the sustainable development of ASEAN region

Biomaterials and biodiversity lab

Indonesian Institute of Sciences (LIPI)

- Developing innovative technologies to utilize tropical plants as energy source and construction materials
- Exploring biodiversity through prospection, monitoring and conservation

Disaster prevention lab

Malaysia-Japan International Institute of Technology (MJIIT)

- Developing integrated disaster prevention science
- Developing early warning systems against large-scale natural disasters through its international cooperation
- Launching a region-wide collaborative research and joint training program for disaster prevention in ASEAN

Stable supply of energy

Effective use of biodiversity

Mitigating disaster risk

Japan-ASEAN centered open innovation

Policy proposal, social implementation, fostering human resources for innovation, disseminating research outcome

SDGs

Goal 7: Affordable and clean energy

Goal 13 Climate action
Goal 17 Partnership

Goal 15: Life and land

Goal 11: Sustainable cities and communities

Japan-ASEAN Platform for Transdisciplinary Studies

<https://japan-asean.cseas.kyoto-u.ac.jp/en/>

The Japan-ASEAN Platform advances transdisciplinary research and integrates perspectives from various sectors of society by bringing together scholars on Southeast Asia, scientists and engineers, the governments, business communities, and civil society. Its core objective is the production of new knowledge gleaned from unique local experiences and local wisdom from the ground.

International Program of Collaborative Research (IPCR)

<https://ipcr.cseas.kyoto-u.ac.jp/en/>

The IPCR aims to (1) promote multi-disciplinary joint research projects on Southeast Asia, emphasizing knowledge gained from local peoples and societies, (2) function as a research hub around a repository of historical documents and research materials on Southeast Asia, (3) support young scholars to present their work at international conferences, and (4) publish monographs.

Center for Information Resources of Area Studies (CIRAS)

<https://ciras.cseas.kyoto-u.ac.jp/>

CIRAS is a Joint Usage / Research Center with two primary functions: (1) integration and sharing of information resources for area studies, and (2) promotion of cross-regional area studies. It promotes comparative studies on politics, economy, society, and environment of the contemporary world. It utilizes advanced and sophisticated information technology in integrating and analyzing data from area studies research.

Visual Documentary Project

<https://vdp.cseas.kyoto-u.ac.jp/en/>

The project makes use of visual forms of expression and documentaries to complement academic literature on Southeast Asian societies and to promote the richness of cultures in the region to Japanese audiences. Since 2012, it has featured documentaries from and by Southeast Asian artists and filmmakers on contemporary issues in the region, such as urban life, politics and everyday life, human flows, people and nature, and care and aging.

RESEARCH DIVISIONS

1 Cross-regional Studies

This division fosters Area Studies approaches across regions through social co-operation and practice-oriented research.

2 Political & Economic Coexistence

This division analyzes the dynamic politico-economic transformations of countries in Southeast Asia through comparative analyses of the experiences of developing countries in the region and the world.

3 Social Coexistence

This division studies the plural co-existence of cultures in Southeast Asia and beyond by looking at the changing interactions between culture, society, and ecology.

5 Global Humanosphere

This division engages critical analyses of global issues of the 21st century to find sustainable and peaceful coexistence of human societies.

03 Global Academic Networks

MOUs

CSEAS actively promotes Southeast Asian and area studies by establishing institutional linkages with leading universities and research institutes in the region as well as the world. The Center has signed memoranda of understanding (MOUs) aimed at fostering academic exchange and cooperation through programs of exchange of faculty members and researchers; exchange of academic information, including library materials and research publications; and joint research activities including seminar, conference and symposium.

Visiting Research Scholars

Since 1975, CSEAS has had an established visiting scholarship program to promote research activities by distinguished scholars. To date, over 350 scholars—many of them leading researchers in their respective fields—have taken advantage of the Center's considerable scholarly resources to engage in path-breaking, multidisciplinary research and to develop comparative, historical, and global perspectives on Southeast Asia and beyond.

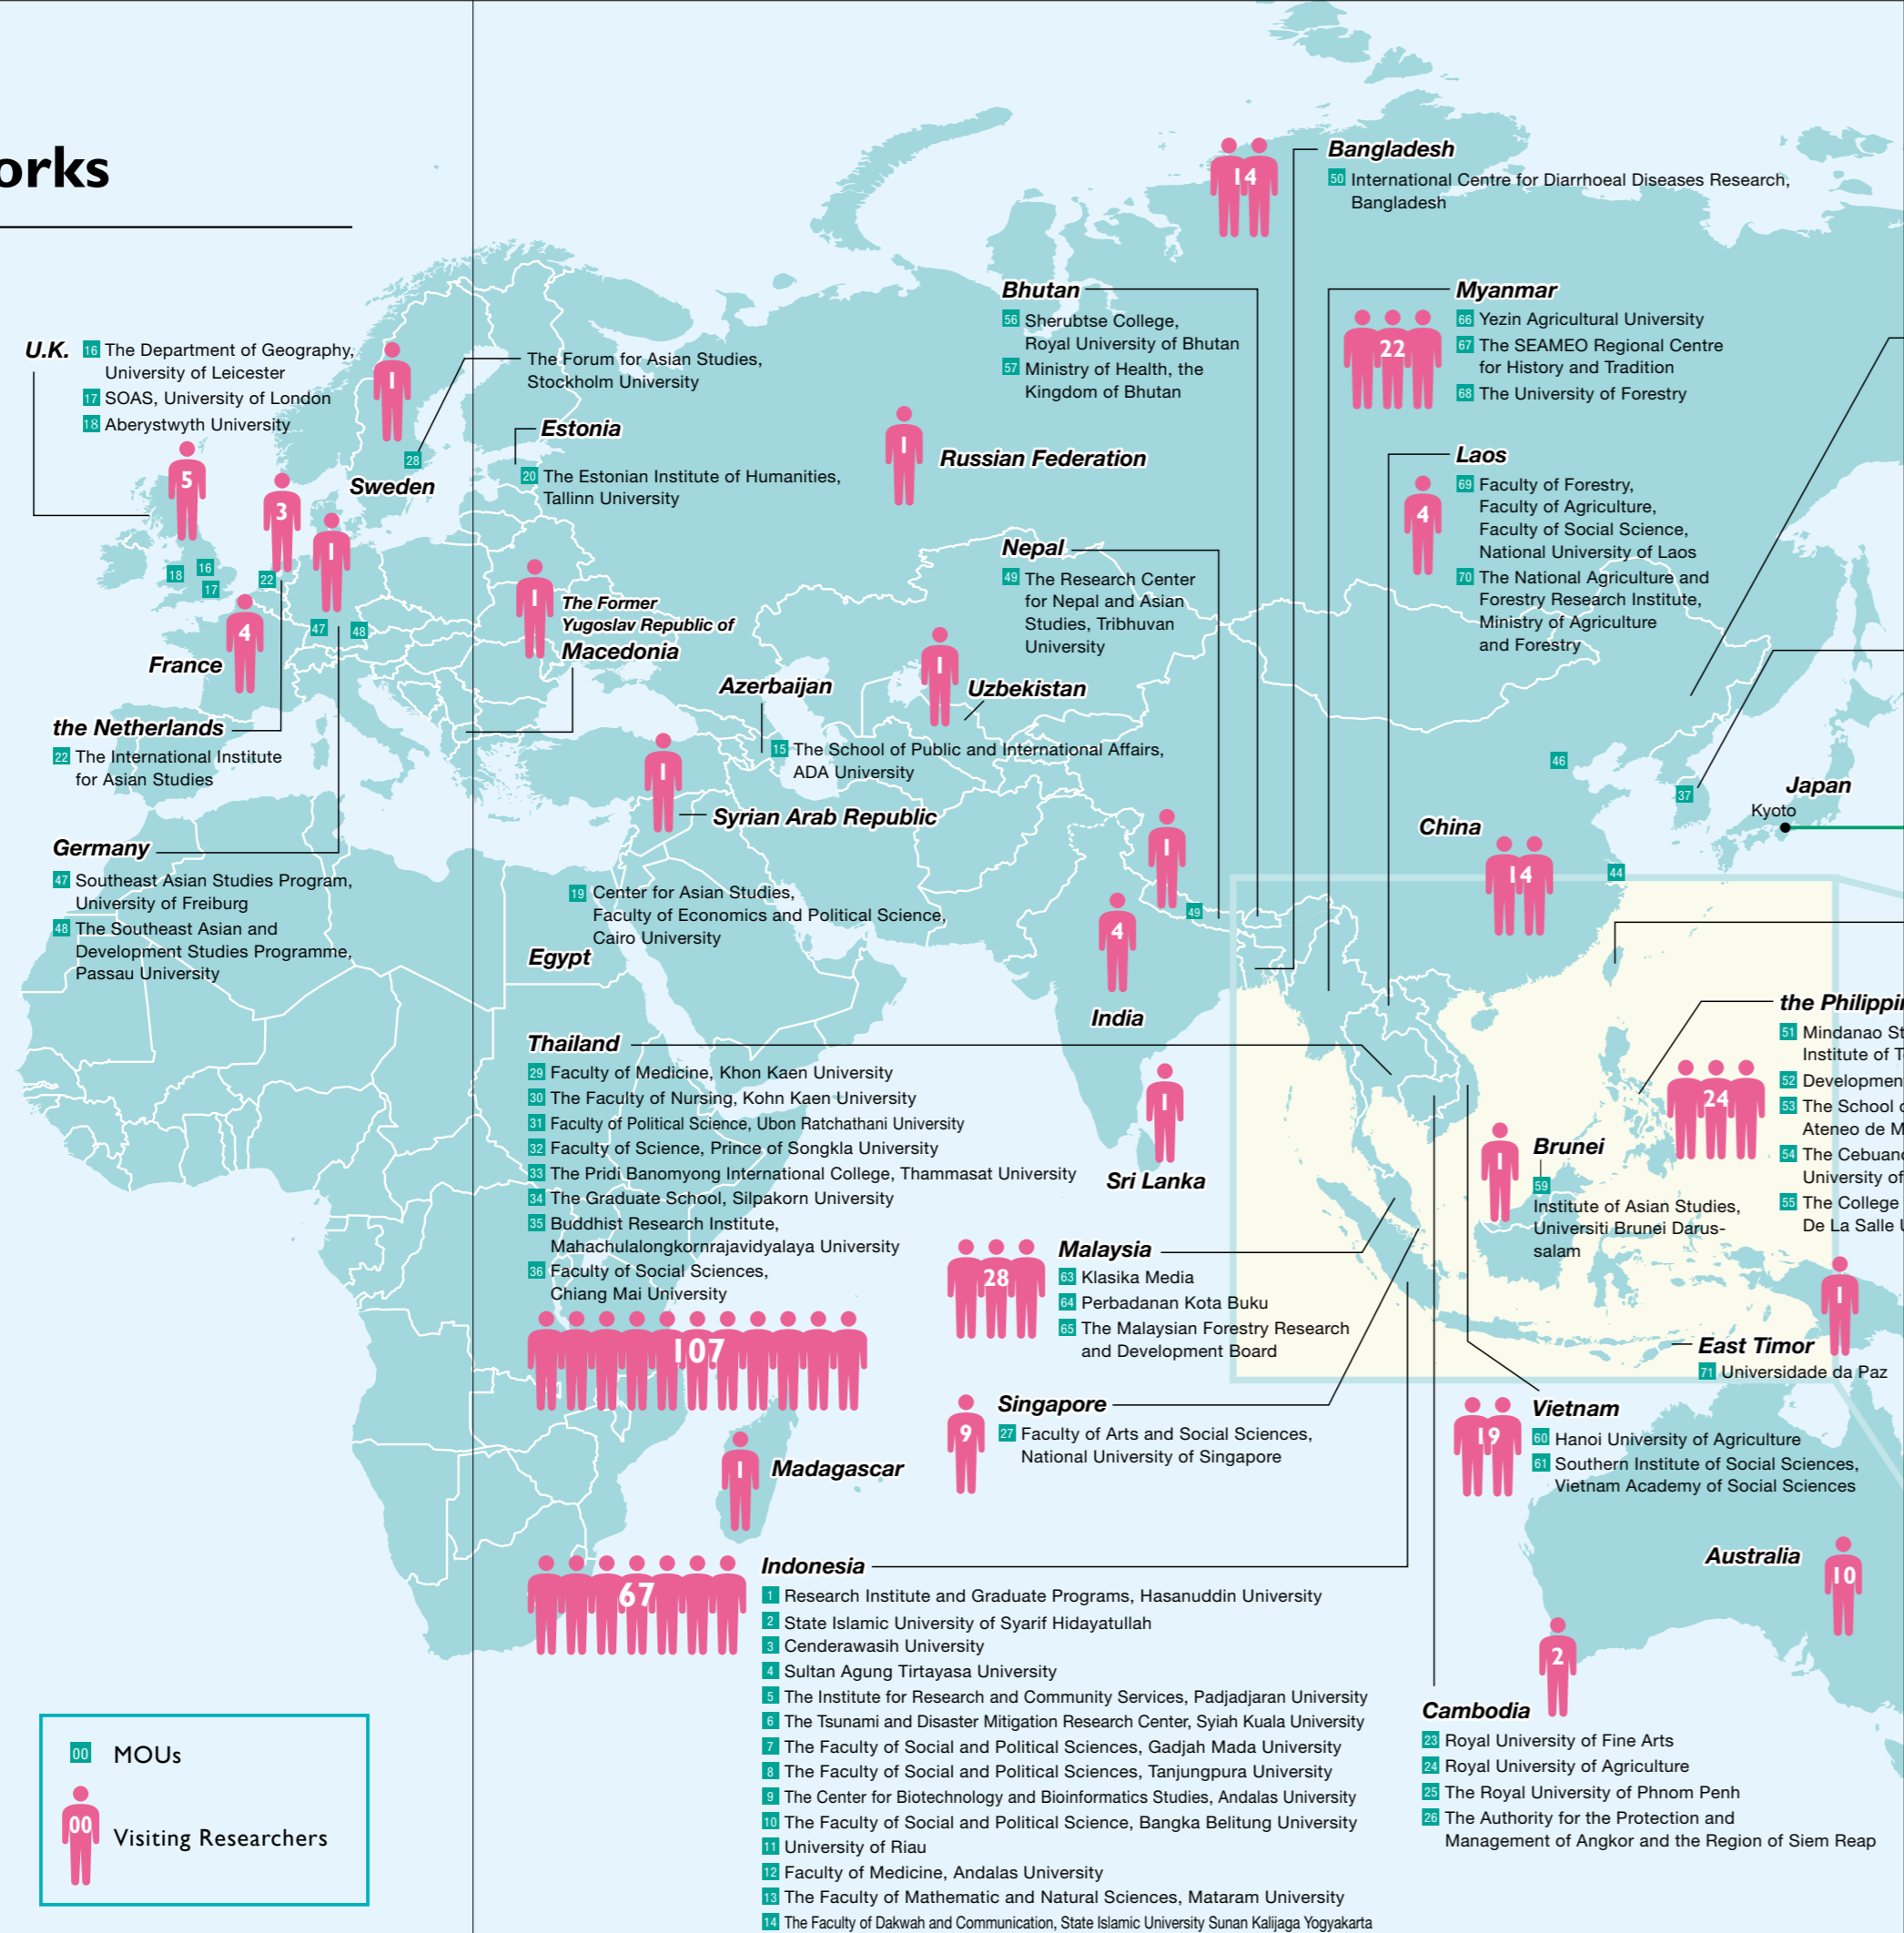

CSEAS hosts scholars and researchers who work on comparative and regional issues from a multi-area perspective to conduct research, write, or pursue other scholarly interests in connection with their field of study. The Center's multi-disciplinary character and the diverse research interests of its faculty offer visiting research scholars an ideal opportunity to exchange ideas, collaborate, and cultivate comparative perspectives—enabling researchers to further their pursuits in Southeast Asian and area studies. CSEAS also offers the invigorating atmosphere of scenic Kyoto, the ancient capital of Japan and the main repository of the country's cultural treasures.

Overseas Liaison Offices

CSEAS has two liaison offices: one in Bangkok and one in Jakarta. These function as bases for collecting research information and materials, such as periodical publications, statistics, maps, and various documents in vernacular Southeast Asian and other languages. Originally established as research lodgings for Japanese researchers in Thailand and Indonesia, they now serve as a base for research across the entire region, and have developed to perform various functions, such as hosting collaborative meetings.

researchers in the region to organize workshops and receptions to enrich the understanding of CSEAS activities. Moreover, the offices strongly support joint research between Japanese and Southeast Asian scholars through the implementation of the International Program of Collaborative Research, CSEAS, or IPCR-CSEAS. They have also taken an active role in supporting the networking activities of Kyoto University in Southeast Asia through the establishment of the Kyoto University ASEAN Center in Bangkok in 2014.

The offices are managed by select researchers and faculty members from CSEAS as well as other universities and institutions in Japan. Those managing the offices collaborate with local Increasingly, the offices are becoming more widely known among local and international scholars and both have received increased numbers of visits in recent years.

Consortium for Southeast Asian Studies in Asia (SEASIA)

<https://seasia-consortium.org/>

The Consortium for Southeast Asian Studies in Asia (SEASIA, pronounced “see-Asia”) was established in October 2013 by 10 of the leading area-studies institutions in Northeast and Southeast Asia to promote region-based Southeast Asian studies. In December 2015, CSEAS was re-appointed as the Secretariat of SEASIA for a three-year term. In this capacity, CSEAS has facilitated a number of SEASIA initiatives that promote the Consortium’s mandate of advancing Southeast Asian studies by linking the leading area studies institutions in the region through academic meetings, seminars, workshops, and symposia.

In January 2017, CSEAS was instrumental in organizing the SEASIA Governing Board meeting at Chulalongkorn University in Bangkok. During that meeting, CSEAS was appointed to crucial positions of responsibility, most notably as a member of the Conference Committee tasked to organize the biannual SEASIA conference, which was held at Chulalongkorn University in December 2017. The conference attracted more than 400 participants, including a strong contingent of scholars from Kyoto University.

Throughout 2017, CSEAS has worked to engage with the various member institutions in ensuring the continued operations of the Consortium. A notable achievement in this regard is the successful revision and extension of the SEASIA Charter, which was officially ratified at the SEASIA Governing Board Meeting, organized by CSEAS in Bangkok in December of that year.

CSEAS continues to play an active role in SEASIA as it expands its network of scholarly collaboration. In September 2017, CSEAS promoted the expansion of SEASIA by driving the processes that led to four very important institutes of Southeast Asian studies in the region being accepted into the Consortium. These are: the ISEAS-Yusof Ishak Institute in Singapore, the Southeast Asia Research Centre at the City University of Hong Kong, the Center for Southeast Asian Studies at Taiwan’s National Chengchi University, and the School of International Studies at Jinan University, Guangzhou, China.

Going forward, CSEAS will continue to play an active part in the growth and flourishing of SEASIA as a one-of-a-kind academic consortium in the region.

HAYAMI, Yoko

Professor
Cross-regional Studies

From July 2016 to January 2017, I spent seven months in Thailand conducting fieldwork on elderly care in and around Chiang Mai for a comparative study between industrializing Thailand and post-industrial Japan on the “dynamics of the social foundations of care in the era of global aging.” I spent my days visiting communities, elderly care facilities, administrators, NGO workers, nurse-aid schools, and others. My questions revolved around the family and community, and how these social foundations are transforming, how care is provided, and how the elderly are experiencing this. The most memorable were interviews I conducted with elderly residents of the public elderly home where I spent almost half of my time. I hope I can do justice to their rich and sometimes emotional narratives in presenting my findings. Subsequently, from mid-April to mid-August 2017, I stayed at Cornell University to conduct library research on the same topic. I am grateful to the SSRC-Abe Fellowship for sponsoring this research, to Chiang Mai University for facilitating my research, to the Southeast Asia Program at Cornell for receiving me as a visiting scholar, and to CSEAS for allowing me to take leave during these precious months.

DE JONG, Wil

Professor
Global Humanosphere

Nowadays I call myself a specialist in forest governance. I have had the privilege of working on tropical forest regions in Asia, Africa, and South America. Together with a large group of collaborators in nine countries, I have studied in detail what is behind the processes of the net forest increase in Asia as a region. In a follow-up study, we hope to clarify how much forest ecosystem services return once forest cover starts to increase. In Latin America, my work has recently focused on climate change and forests and forest legality. I would like to expand the forest legality work in both Latin America and Asia in parallel, but unfortunately funding and government agencies in Asia are more hesitant to support such work. I am hoping to extend work on ecosystem services and forest transition, the current focus of an APFNet-funded project in China and Laos, into Latin America. With support from CSEAS funds for its Japan-Latin America hub, I organized a workshop in the Imperial City of Cusco, Peru. The workshop brought together specialists from Asia, and South America, and Europe to discuss how the concept of ecosystem services is understood in different regions of the world, how the concept is used to guide academic research, how it informs natural resource policies, and whether it mobilizes private entrepreneurship.

Library

<https://library.cseas.kyoto-u.ac.jp/en/>

The CSEAS library has been a most essential and foundational resource in the promotion of research activities in the field of Southeast Asian and area studies. As the result of ongoing collection development focusing on academic publications on Southeast Asia and related areas, the library currently holds approximately 246,000 items and assures access by both domestic and overseas libraries through its open access policy and reference services.

The CSEAS co-research program now has a special slot for documents based on research, and provides sufficient funding for acquisition of library materials related to proposed document-based research. The CSEAS library looks forward to working with many librarians in the near future.

Southeast Asian Vernacular Language Books

The CSEAS library houses approximately 90,000 materials published in various vernacular languages of Southeast Asia, including publications in Indonesian, Thai (materials searchable in Thai scripts), and Vietnamese. The library also has the following six special collections.

The largest book collection for Southeast Asian studies in Japan approx. 90,000 vols. (Total no. of books approx. 246,000 vols.)

The library's main building was constructed in the 1870s.

SEASIA 2017

Following on from the success of the first Consortium for Southeast Asian Studies in Asia (SEASIA) Conference held in Kyoto in 2015, the second SEASIA biannual conference was held on 16 to 17 December 2017 in Chulalongkorn University, Bangkok, Thailand. The conference was held in conjunction with the commemoration of the centenary of Chulalongkorn University. The opening ceremony was presided over by HRH Princess Maha Chakri Sirindhorn. The conference had over 400 registered participants, over 250 paper presenters from more than 30 countries in Southeast Asia and beyond. The event was organized by a Conference Committee that included CSEAS as the Consortium Secretariat.

Special Collections

Charas Collection (Thai)

This personal collection donated by Mr. Charas Pikul, a former Thai government officer, consists of 9,000 volumes of monographs, including the largest collection of cremation volumes outside Thailand.

Foronda and Ocampo Collections (Philippine)

These two personal collections of the famous historians Dr. Marcelino Foronda and Dr. Ambeth R. Ocampo from the Philippines consists of 8,000 monographs, rare books, and ephemera from the 17th century to the Marcos years.

Materials from the Ocampo Collection
Viage de Novios: Tanda de Valses (Sheet Music from 19th century)

Yoneo Ishii Collection

This collection of the late Yoneo Ishii, emeritus professor of Kyoto University, contains approximately 15,000 items, including books, research documents, and photographs, mainly on Southeast Asian studies.

Malay Periodicals Collection

This collection includes 10 Malay periodicals published in the mid-20th century in Malaysia.

The Turkestanskii Sbornik Collection

This is a digitized version of Turkestanskii sbornik, a compilation of various publications referring to Central Asia that was collected in Imperial Russia and contains 122 items.

Indonesia Islam Collection

This is a collection of recent Islamic publications in Indonesia comprised of approximately 2,000 volumes.

Map Collections

The collection of maps at CSEAS covers Southeast Asia as well as almost the whole area from South to East Asia and the surrounding regions. At present, the collection comprises nearly 44,000 sheets, and includes the historically valuable series “Gaihouzu,” Japanese Army topographical maps and nautical charts covering South, East, and Southeast Asia. Materials in the collection range from the pre-war period maps to recent aerial surveys. In addition to these, CSEAS also houses 24,000 topographic, geographical, land-use, vegetation, administrative, and road maps. CSEAS stores not only maps, but also other materials, such as aerial photos. The Williams-Hunt Collection, for example, includes 5,800 aerial photographs taken in mainland Southeast Asia during and after the World War II. CSEAS recognizes all of these maps and photos as precious common properties for Southeast Asian studies and therefore in recent years has been advancing the digitization of materials to make them more widely available.

Databases

Area studies are interdisciplinary science and databases are essential tools to accumulate, share, and integrate diverse data from various domains. However, as each database encodes data using language, vocabularies, and metadata depending on the convention of the domain, building databases and integrating heterogeneous data are difficult. CSEAS has developed MyDatabase (MyDB) and the Resource Sharing System (RSS) to support comprehensive information processing for area studies. MyDB is a database builder, allowing researchers to use nonstandard vocabularies according to their own purpose and to build databases without expert knowledge about servers and database systems. Most of the CSEAS databases are built using MyDB. RSS integrates heterogeneous databases on the Internet and provides users with a uniform interface to retrieve databases seamlessly in one operation. RSS integrates more than 50 databases, including not only those of CSEAS, but also databases from foreign research institutes. We are currently developing next-generation systems that can make better use of big data and the cloud.

06 | Education

CSEAS is committed to education. Our faculty provide courses both within Kyoto University and at other institutions. At the undergraduate level, faculty teach courses on a variety of topics relating to Southeast Asia at the Institute for Liberal Arts and Sciences (ILAS) as well as pocket seminars. At the graduate level, faculty provide specialized courses across the disciplinary spectrum at the Graduate School of Asian and African Area Studies (ASAFAS). CSEAS also offers opportunities for graduate students from Southeast Asia to participate in an annual seminar sponsored and held within the region called the Southeast Asia Seminar. As part of the educational outreach program of CSEAS and in collaboration with the government-sponsored Super Global High School (SGH) program, CSEAS also offers special yearly lectures to high school students from schools participating in this initiative. This program offers valuable opportunities for young students to be exposed to current and diverse issues that are playing out in the region.

07 Publications

Since its beginning, CSEAS has prioritized publishing research results. The academic journal Tonan Aja Kenkyu began with the founding of the Center. Since the 1960s monographs have been published in both Japanese and in English, and over the years we have engaged in various publication initiatives. A complete list of CSEAS publications is available on the homepage of the editorial office at <https://edit.cseas.kyoto-u.ac.jp/>.

Monographs

CSEAS publishes the below series for the presentation of original academic studies contributing to the development of area studies in Southeast Asia and beyond. We receive manuscripts from within and outside the country, with special emphasis on Asian authors. Each series has a different emphasis in terms of the types of material and the regions covered. Journals

Since its first publication in 1963, the bilingual quarterly Tonan Aja Kenkyu has reflected the Center for Southeast Asian Studies' strong commitment to publishing the best of empirically grounded, multidisciplinary, and contemporary research on Southeast Asia and beyond.

Southeast Asian Studies
<https://englishkyoto-seas.org/>
 Published three times a year (April, August, December)

Japanese Journal of Southeast Asian Studies (Tonan Aja Kenkyu)
<https://kyoto-seas.org/>
 Published twice a year (January, July)

In 2012, we launched Southeast Asian Studies as its sister English journal in order to reach broader international audiences, while Tonan Aja Kenkyu was reorganized as a biannual Japanese journal. Reflecting the Center's fieldwork-based, multidisciplinary, and contemporary approaches, both journals publish work from diverse fields of study on Southeast Asia, including the natural sciences, social sciences, and arts and humanities. Both journals are indexed in Scopus run by Elsevier.

Kyoto Working Papers on Area Studies

<https://edit.cseas.kyoto-u.ac.jp/kyoto-working-papers-on-area-studies/>

Kyoto Working Papers on Area Studies is a series published jointly by the three area studies institutions of Kyoto University: the Graduate School of Asian and African Area Studies (ASAFAS); the Center for African Area Studies (CAAS); and, the Center for Southeast Asian Studies (CSEAS).

CIRAS Discussion Paper Series

<https://edit.cseas.kyoto-u.ac.jp/discussion-paper-series-2017/>

The CIRAS (Center for Information Resources of Area Studies) discussion paper series is published to ensure the quick release of research results by CSEAS faculty members and those involved in the CIRAS joint research projects. In addition to papers, we release a variety of research results, such as research reports, reference materials, annotated bibliographies, and records on workshops and symposia published by CIRAS faculty overseeing the author (editor).

Online Academic Community of Southeast Asia

Kyoto Review of Southeast Asia

<https://kyotoreview.org/>

The Kyoto Review of Southeast Asia was launched to promote exchange among the intellectual communities of Southeast Asia. Each issue is organized around a theme and reviews recent work, especially books published in the region and in local languages. Recognizing that mutual inaccessibility of national languages is an important barrier to deepening knowledge of neighboring countries, we use translation to facilitate informed discussion. It is the only journal that publishes articles in five languages: English, Thai, Bahasa, Vietnamese, and Japanese. Moreover, the Young Academic's Voice column promotes works by young intellectuals who conduct research on Southeast Asia and provides a platform for them to disseminate their work through CSEAS's extensive networks across the globe.

08 | Community Building

In line with CSEAS's research agendas, faculty and the projects they run, provide public contributions. CSEAS Staff frequently provide invaluable services in the form of ongoing teaching and outreach programs within Japan, Southeast Asia, and East Asia. Additionally, some of CSEAS flagship projects such as the Kyoto Review of Southeast Asia provide up-to-date high-profile commentary on major issues in the region with access in Southeast Asian vernaculars. Other projects, such as the Visual Documentary Project (VDP) aim to build bridges between academia and civil society through dialogue with filmmakers. CSEAS has also played a role in building networks within the region and beyond through MOUs and the formation of the Consortium for Southeast Asian Studies in Asia (SEASIA) to help academics liaise more effectively and stimulate new linkages between not only scholars, but public intellectuals.
